Expressions through color

Oil painter Anita Mosher grew up in Kansas City. Encouraged by her artist-mother, she began studying art at the Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art when she was 6 years old. As an adult, she continued her education with noted Russian Impressionist painter Don Sahli at the Sahli School of Art painting plein air landscapes and still life for three years. At the Boulder Academy of Fine Art she spent a year under the instruction of LV Davis focusing on portraiture. Mosher has also studied at the Art Students League of Denver with notable artists Kim Mackey and Jay Moore.

Known for her powerful color work, Mosher conveys her expressionistic style across a variety of subject matter, including still lifes, landscapes and her trademark roosters, in a painterly manner. She tries to convey movement and life in each piece. Her love of landscapes and animals stems from her Colorado home where she also maintains a studio.

"The color and light on shapes are the relationships that interest me and spark my creative energy," says Mosher. "I enjoy painting the beauty I find in everyday life around me, including animals, still life, figures or landscape. I find I express myself through color and shapes much better than I can with words."

Mosher's work is in many private and public collections, and she is a signature member of the Plein Air Artists Colorado, the Outdoor Painters Society and the National Oil and Acrylic Painters' Society. Upcoming exhibitions include the Governor's Invitational Art Show & Sale April 23, 2011, at the Loveland Museum in Loveland, Colorado, and the Plein Air Southwest in April 2011 at the Southwest Gallery in Dallas, Texas.

Four galleries showcase Mosher's original oils including her own studio-gallery in a charming historic neighborhood in Denver, plus Evergreen Fine Art in Evergreen, Colorado, the Corse Gallery & Atelier in Jacksonville, Florida, and Mainview Gallery in Scottsdale, Arizona.

Texas art collector Steve Burton says of Mosher's work, "I have commissioned four pieces from Anita...a still life, a seascape, and two landscapes. All four pieces have a glowing quality that draws the viewer into the scene." 🍷
